Why Ogden Is Trading Center of This Region

(By O. J. Stilwell.)

Ogden people have been known to make purchases in other cities and, when questioned, always have admitted they paid more for their purchases than would have been charged in Ogden.

There is no question about Ogden being the most economical city of the west in which to purchase all kinds of goods, from a trainload of dried meats to a paper of pins. Nearly all food products are produced on the spot and, of course, can be sold cheaply, since no freight has to be paid on the finished product; and goods which are shipped in enjoy the lowest freight rate, since Ogden is the railroad center of the intermountain states.

Ogden already enjoys exceptional transportation facilities which constantly are being improved. Electric lines enter the city from four directions with rapid and frequent service, while steam lines radiate from Ogden to every town of importance in the intermountain states.

Highways which were formerly called good roads reach all nearby communities. The signs of the times indicate the automobile will predominate in the short distance travel of the future.

Ogden has earned whatever trade it may receive from this source, since Weber county was the first in the state to build a mile of hardsurfaced road and has always kept in the lead in road building.

At the close of the present season, a hard-surfaced road will have been completed through Riverdale to the south line of Weber county, giving access to Roy.

The government post road to Hooper is now underway, eliminating a piece of road which has been impossible for one or two months of each year, during which time a populous farming community, tributary to Ogden, has been isolated.

Through Ogden canyon was built the first macadam road in the state of Utah, which road is still in use, but with a prospect of being replaced by cement. This road supports the heavy traffic of the entire Ogden valley in which are the towns of Huntsville, Eden and Lib-

Cement and tarvia roads reach North Ogden, Pleasant View and Hot Springs, the only neglected community being Plain City, which, however, has its electric line.

The number of people who can now easily reach Ogden is very large and increasing rapidly.

By the three principal modes of travel, all these people can more easily reach Ogden than any other and, on arrival, they will find what they want and find it at a more reasonable price than in any other intermountain city.
